Bas Rapati, Chief Analytics Officer at Van Lanschot Kempen: “Technological solutions help our private bankers delve into what truly matters to our clients and serve them as personally and relevantly as possible. Winning the PWM Wealth Tech Awards is therefore a great honor and a wonderful recognition for our teams and innovative approach. It motivates us to continue working on the wealth manager of the future. A future where personal attention, enhanced by advanced technology, is central to optimally serving our clients.”

The Financial Times and PWM Wealth Tech Awards provide visibility to technological innovation in the wealth management sector with their annual awards. The awards highlight companies and products that use technology to enhance client experience, streamline operations, and improve investment outcomes. A jury panel of experts in wealth management, technology, and finance evaluates the entries.

At Van Lanschot Kempen, a personal client approach is paramount. To achieve this, an advanced digital platform has been developed that enables private bankers and relationship managers to serve clients in a highly personalised manner. This ensures that every interaction with the client is meaningful and fully tailored to their individual needs.

The platform forms the foundation of our hyper-personalised service and integrates data-driven insights with workflow management. This enhances the capabilities of private bankers and automates certain tasks, allowing them to focus on delivering exceptional service. And this gives our clients time for what truly matters to them, more time for family, business, or personal matters.
